What went well?

What should we keep doing?
What should we celebrate?
Where did we make progress?

According to the World Bank, India is a global agricultural powerhouse.

It is the world's largest producer of milk, pulses, and spices, and has the world's largest cattle herd (buffaloes), as well as largest area under wheat, rice and cotton.

It is the second largest producer of rice, wheat, cotton, sugarcane, farmed fish, sheep & goet meet, fruit, vegetables and tea.

India's Agricultural Crop production
Analysis(1997-2021)

To increase quality and yields, it is crucial to understand the current nutrient levels of the soil be able to ascertain which areas require improvement.

What went poorly?

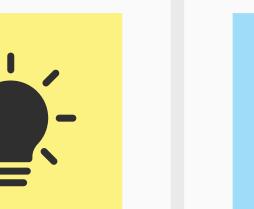

Where did we have problems?
What was frustrating to us or others?
What held us back?

Erosion of soil by heavy rain, floods, insufficient vegetation cover etc., reduces farm productivity.

Inadequate irrigation facilities and poor management of water resources.

How should we take action?

What do you believe we should do next? What specific things should we change? What should extend beyond this meeting?

If the agriculture industry does not look beyond traditional strategies, future generations will not be able to produce and take advantage of our arable land.

The country has come a long way with bioethanol policies, and it is likely to achieve a 10% ethanol blending target in 2023-24.

Adoption of hybrid seeds, extension of irrigation facilities and application of intensive method of cultivation in India.

What ideas do you have?

What ideas do you have for future work together?
Where do you see opportunities to improve?
What has untapped potential?

Implementation of land reforms. Land reforms are the first and most important point for improving productivity.

The Indian agriculture market is expected to reach USD 581 billion by 2028.

Increasing net incomes of farmers on account of cost reduction, reduced risks, similar yields, incomes from intercropping.

See an example